Examining formerly incarcerated to fill gaps in health inequities

Researchers at the University of Iowa are looking for participants who were formerly incarcerated in Iowa prisons to examine public health implications of incarceration.

Incarcerated individuals often experience health inequities while in prison that can lead to lasting health effects. We want to hear from you about your experiences to help us begin to understand some of these health inequities.

What can you expect in participating?

- Answering health-related questions over an approximately 90-120 minute interview
- Answering health-related questions over a brief survey

Are you eligible?

- Spent time in an institution under Iowa Department of Corrections *and
- Sought a medical diagnosis or treatment while incarcerated

Locations

- Iowa City & surrounding area
